Hello Cyberwolves

Spring is in the air, and a new season of growth is upon us. Beautiful buds and blossoms are everywhere, delighting our senses with the pleasing aromas that promise new life, hope and growth.

Cyber blossoms are blooming in another form in cyberspace. It appears that many malware buds have grown into chaos as soon as malicious links have been clicked on and infected attachments have been downloaded, leaving our cybersecurity specialists with their hands full. Malware does not judge nor discriminate, yet it affects everything in its path.

It's time to wake up and smell the roses when it comes to suspicious links and attachments. It is imperative to take a chance this spring and create positive outcomes in all aspects of our lives especially in cyberspace.

Be vigilant and spring into action by sharing your cyber wisdom with your staff, family, and friends so that they can become cyber-savvy.

Yours Securely,

Trust Us; it's a Good Day to Update All Your Devices. iOS, Windows, and Chrome all have zero-day vulnerabilities that hackers are going after. Now that the fixes are here, you need to install them ASAP. ANOTHER DAY, ANOTHER nag from your iPhone and Mac that an update is ready. And from Chrome. And for Microsoft, it's patch Tuesday, so that's another round of installs on your plate. As tempting as it may be to kick these down the road—why not just wait for iOS 15 in a few weeks?—you'll want to go ahead and get these done.
